

What U.S. state produces the most peaches?

Georgia produces the most peaches in the United States. Georgia is widely known as the “Peach State,” so it is often assumed to be the largest producer.

California produces the most peaches in the United States. Although Georgia is nicknamed the “Peach State,” California actually leads the U.S. in total peach production by a large margin.

